Combine exquisitely tailor-made luxury garments for men with Swarovski crystals and you may get a slight visual of what this runway show was all about – Man Glam! Marlon Gobel’s display of obvious talent at Mercedes-Benz Fashion Week in New York 2012 had spectators as well as the extreme fashion-conscious in attendance, taking notice. Male models with slicked back hair, like those that scream at us from the covers of GQ, sauntered down the runway in sultry grays, rich browns, outrageous reds and deep purples while wearing the hippest of footwear made exclusively for Marlon Gobel himself by Walk-Over, the official sponsor.

Cashmere turtlenecks, trousers woven with 24K gold, crystal embellishments and quilted crocodile jackets were just a few of the unexpected power statements that this fashion designer conjured up, but the ultimate coupe de grace on this sizzling hot catwalk was a gold crystal-studded armored jacket paired with a silk tie and wingtip boot that would have even the famed fashion goddess Anna Wintour lifting an eyebrow of intrigue.
